

INTER-UNIVERSITY RESEARCH PARTNERSHIP MEETING

Albuquerque District (3 MAR 2022)

Meeting participants included representatives from the University of Alabama, the Alabama Water Institute, the University of New Mexico, Mississippi State University, the University of Georgia, and the Georgia Institute of Technology.

SUMMARY: The USACE Tribal Nations Technical Center of Expertise hosted an inter-university research partnership meeting 3 MAR to align university and federal research and technical services with the upcoming infrastructure work in Indian Country. Meeting participants included representatives from the University of Alabama, the Alabama Water Institute, the University of New Mexico, Mississippi State University, the University of Georgia, and the Georgia Institute of Technology. Attendees discussed their institution’s research capabilities and resources, upcoming infrastructure work, and collaboration. Attendees resolved to develop an alliance for the creation of resilient Indigenous infrastructure.

KEY TAKEAWAYS:

- This meeting gathered key leaders from 7 leading research institutions to align goals and actions in the building of resilient Indigenous infrastructure.
- The alliance created from this meeting will allow university, federal, and tribal partners to network, collaborate, and coordinate upcoming infrastructure work in Indian Country.

Dr. Ron Kneebone and Mr. Michael Fedoroff of the TNTCX with Dr. Adrian Oglesby and Dr. David Hanson of UNM.

Dr. Ron Kneebone and Mr. Michael Fedoroff of the TNTCX with Dr. Kate Brauman and Mr. Mike Gremillion of AWI.

